The Fully Indexed Interest Rate and Fully Indexed Payment are based on the current index plus the margin at the time of the effective date shown above, and are only an example of what your rate and payment would be if your loan adjustment date was the date shown above. The Adjusted Interest Rate and Adjusted Payment may differ when the term for your initial rate expires. Your mortgage will change on the adjustment dates and will be equal to an index, which is the 30 Day Average SOFR Index, the Secured Overnight Financing Rate as published by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, plus a margin of 2.75%.

* After the Initial Interest Rate period, your Fully Indexed Rate and corresponding Payment can increase or decrease every 6 months according to the current index.
